

TRINITY COLLEGE
HUMAN RIGHTS PROGRAM

Proudly presents the 2016 Advocacy Fellow-in-Residence
ASHLEY WILLIAMS

Ashley Williams interrupting a private Hillary Clinton fundraiser with a sign that read “We have to bring them to heel,” a line from Clinton’s now–infamous 1996 “super-predators” speech, recently cited in Michelle Alexander’s article on the Clinton Legacy for The Nation.¹

March 21: Workshop - Activism 101

5-7pm in Terrace Room B, Mather Hall

March 22: “Moving Targets: Queer Politics of Organizing in the Movement for Black Lives”

Evening Lecture - 6:30pm in the Rittenberg Lounge, Mather Hall

March 23: Performance - Conflate

6:30pm in the Vernon Social Center

March 24: “Organizing as Care”

Common Hour Lecture - 12:15pm in Terrace Room B, Mather Hall

Ashley S. Williams is a queer black organizer and artist in Charlotte, NC. Ashley attended the University of North Carolina at Charlotte to study dance and philosophy, and is currently a Master’s Candidate in Ethics and Applied Philosophy at UNCC. Ashley has been an active participant around Black Lives Matter, Black-Palestinian Solidarity and ending police violence in Charlotte. Ashley works to decentralize whiteness and build community in non-colonial ways.

Sponsored by the CUGS Arts Initiative

¹Lubben, Alex. “We Spoke to Ashley Williams, the Black Queer Organizer who interrupted Hillary Clinton.” The Nation. The Nation, 26 Feb. 2016. Web. 3 March 2016