Richardson is survived by his wife of 53 years, Margy; children Rick (Darcy), Merrill ’92, and Benagh Newsome ’95 (Josh ’95); five grandchildren, including Addison Newsome ’22; and brother James Richardson (Debby).

James F. English Jr. H'89, Trinity's 16th president, and wife Isabelle H'88

James Fairfield "Jim" English Jr. H'89, who served as Trinity's 16th president, died on June 2, 2020, at his home in Noank, Connecticut, at the age of 93. His wife, Isabelle Spotswood Cox English H'88, age 88, died just nine days after him, on June 11, also at home.

Jim began his career at Trinity in 1977 as vice president for finance and planning. He brought with him the experience that he gained during 26 years with Connecticut Bank and Trust Company, where he rose to CEO and chair of the board. As a vice president at Trinity, he was responsible for overseeing fundraising and management of the college's endowment, as well as long-range financial planning.

When former Trinity President Theodore Lockwood '48, H'81, went on a six-month sabbatical following his wife's sudden passing in 1980, Jim stepped in as acting president. On July 1, 1981, he assumed the president's role outright and immediately turned his focus to several priorities, including the college's academic program, Trinity's vital relationship with its Hartford home, and the fiscal health of the institution.

With Jim's encouragement, the college added writing and mathematics proficiency requirements and an interdisciplinary minor requirement. The five-part distribution requirement, which fostered well-rounded intellectual growth, also was implemented. He also approved Trinity's participation in the CTW Library Consortium with Connecticut College and Wesleyan University, greatly expanding the library's offerings. College-related programs in Hartford, including internships and faculty and student opportunities at area organizations, flourished under him. The Trinity campus also became home to a day care center that continues to serve children of Trinity community members and local residents. His experience in finance proved useful as the Campaign for Trinity capital campaign shattered its $42 million goal by more than $8 million.

In 1989, at his last Trinity Commencement as president, in light of all he had done for the college during his eight years at the helm, Jim was awarded an honorary doctor of humane letters degree; he also served as that year's Commencement speaker.

His was a family dedicated to Trinity. His father, the late Reverend James Fairfield English, was a member of the Trinity Class of 1916. Jim's first glimpses of Trinity were said to be when his father took the young boy to see the recently completed Chapel.

Jim's return to Trinity later in life took a winding path. After enlisting in the U.S. Army, he completed a Japanese language program and served in the 441st Counter Intelligence Detachment in the occupation of Japan. Upon his return, he earned a B.A. in English from Yale and went on to earn an M.A. in English from Cambridge University and an LL.B. from the University of Connecticut School of Law, where he was a part-time faculty member for several years before turning to banking.

Isabelle English earned a B.A. in studio art from Hollins College. She continued her studies in painting and drawing through the 1970s and 1980s. As the first lady of Trinity, she contributed to the life of the college through her support for the on-campus day care center, her collaborations with the art history program and Austin Arts Center, and her work with the landscaping staff. In 1988, the college recognized her achievements and awarded her an honorary doctor of fine arts degree.

The Englishes are survived by children James Fairfield English III, Margaret Stuart English Unsworth, and William Berkeley English; 10 grandchildren; and eight great-grandchildren. They were predeceased by their daughter Alice Bradford English Johansson.

CURRENT FACULTY

Michael Anthony "Tony" Hall, 71, of Tobago, died on April 26, 2020.

Hall was a lecturer and artist-in-residence in the Trinity in Trinidad study-away program at the time of his passing. He came to Trinity in 1998 and soon collaborated with Milla Riggio, James J. Goodwin Professor of English, Emerita, to found the Trinity in Trinidad study-away program. Hall also taught filmmaking and playwriting and served as an artist-in-residence on the Hartford campus for a decade. Hall, born in Trinidad and Tobago, earned a bachelor's degree in drama and education from the University of Alberta and a diploma in film and advanced television production from the Northern Alberta Institute of Technology. He was an accomplished playwright, screenwriter, actor, and director; he also founded and led the Lordstreet Theatre in Trinidad. The Daily Express, a local newspaper in Trinidad, called him "(o)ne of the key people responsible for the cultural revolution that led to a greater appreciation for local theatre, music, dance and the arts in general."

Hall is survived by his wife, Mary, and two children.

In Memory Guidelines

We will not announce the death of an alum without first confirming with a previously published obituary or direct notification from a relative. Also, alumni who passed away more than two years prior to the date of publication will be listed in Death Notices, along with alumni for whom we do not have enough information for a longer obituary.

FORMER FACULTY

Charles Robert Miller, 90, of Sarasota, Florida, died on April 4, 2020.

Miller, professor of physics, emeritus, earned a B.S. in 1952 and a Ph.D. in 1962, both in physics and both from the California Institute of Technology. He came to Trinity after a one-year teaching stint at Amherst College. Miller served as a distinguished member of Trinity's faculty from 1961 until his retirement in 1996. It was said that while he was a theoretical physicist, he also had an unusual interest in and facility with physics apparatuses. Since theorists were not assigned research labs, Miller used the equipment in the instructional labs to work on interesting experiments for physics students.

Miller is survived by his wife, Cynthia Lichtenstein, and daughters Marianne Miller '79 and Jennifer Miller.
